THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.
By the Governor of Wisconsin.

A PROCLAMATION.

Another year of health, peace and prosperity has been vouchsafed unto the people of Wisconsin, mercifully reminding them to acknowledge in a befitting manner their gratitude to Almighty God and dependence upon him for the blessings of His providence.

Wherefore, in obedience to the custom of the country, now wisely sanctioned by law, and conforming to the recent proclamation of the President of the United States, in that behalf, I, WILLIAM E. SWIFT, Governor of the State of Wisconsin, do hereby appoint

Thursday, the 28th day of November, instant, as a day of public thanksgiving and praise; and I recommend to all the people of Wisconsin, on that day, to show forth their gratitude, by observing the day with religious and social observances, and to pray for the peace and prosperity of the United States, and for the well-being of the people of Wisconsin.

By the Governor: WILLIAM E. SWIFT.
JAMES D. WALKER, Secretary of State.

THE CITY CHARTER.

At a meeting of the Common Council last night, Mayor Norcross did what many of our more considerate citizens will regard a wise thing, in suggesting that a bill be introduced in the Legislature, to amend the Charter of the City of Janesville, which will make the term of the city officers two years instead of one. We cannot see wherein any well-grounded objection can be made to the proposed amendment. The reason why the change is suggested, is that it requires considerable time for a Clerk, a City Attorney, or a Treasurer, to become thoroughly acquainted with the provisions of the city charter, and under the present term of office, an officer no sooner becomes informed as to the duties of his position than his term of service expires, unless, perchance, he is re-nominated and re-elected. The Mayor made a strong point in favor of the amendment when he stated to the Council that it was almost impossible for the Clerk, the Attorney, or the Treasurer, to arrive at a practical knowledge of the charter in the short space of one year. We believe in the best possible service our officers can render the city, and we are convinced that it will increase the efficiency of the officers to extend their terms to two years. The change will be better for the interests of the city, and of course much better for the officers. The proposed amendment seems so practical as well as necessary, that it appears there could be no opposition to the movement. However, it may be well to heed Alderman Lawrence's suggestion, and call a mass meeting that a more general expression of the people may be received on the subject.

The Mayor also suggested that the charter be amended so as to create the office of Street Commissioner. If it were certain that the people would elect a man of practical common sense to the office, the change would be a good one. In almost every well-managed village and city we find a Street Commissioner, whose duty it is to see that the streets and sidewalks are kept in at least fair condition. The office is a very important one, and no man of changeable mind or visionary ideas is fit for the place. Good streets and substantial and safe sidewalks are just as important as reliable bridges, and are as necessary as school houses, and should never be neglected. Therefore, the change is a capital one, provided the right man will be found to fill the office. It is easy to make the office, but not so easy to find the man who can build a good and permanent street.

THE ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES.
The annual report of General Sherman has been made and is now in the hands of the Secretary of War. Of course the General gives full statistical information regarding the army, but the report is chiefly filled with the movements of the army during the past year, and therefore the Indian troubles receive a large share of attention. The army has done nothing but fight Indians, and judging from our present Indian policy it will continue to fight them year after year. The United States government entertains an attitude toward the murderous Indians which actually baffles common sense. We appropriate millions every year to support them, and yet they must be fought, and they keep half the army on a double-quick through the Territories nearly the entire year; and even then the efforts of the army to prevent Indian troubles are fruitless. The army can not prevent the Indian outbreaks. "All it can do, after the Indians break out, plunder, or steal, and kill harmless families, is to pursue and capture them in detail, after infinite toil; then to conduct them to their reservations again, and turn them loose to return to the same game."

The General says there are 7,829 enlisted men in the ten cavalry regiments, 2,630 enlisted men in the five artillery regiments, and 11,295 enlisted men in the twenty-five infantry regiments, which make only 21,664 enlisted men. There are other enlisted men in the engineer battalion, at recruiting depots, in the music corps, in the ordnance departments, and so on, which swell the number of enlisted men in the army to 24,761; and this is the army of the United States! It is but a skeleton in form, and being small in size it has but a scattered condition, and consequently the labor imposed upon it is severe and annoying. It has been compelled to do, what General Sheridan says "no other nation in the world would have attempted with less than 60,000 or 70,000. The little army of less than 25,000 men is scattered over half a continent. It is looked upon by Democratic politicians and demagogues with envy, hate, and suspicion, and hence the Confederate attempt to rob it of its strength, and make it virtually an army of tramps. It has been denounced by them as a "hot-bed of aristocracy," and grave robbing is on the increase and especially in Ohio. The law don't seem to possess any power to stop the outrageous crime, and the Burlington Hawkeye suggests that "probably the best way to put a stop to this grave-robbing business would be, in every case where a grave is rifled, to fill the vacancy promptly with a medical student."

Notwithstanding the fact that Abbott, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, received less than 10,000 votes at the recent election, the Democratic State Committee has decided to open new headquarters in Boston, and to reorganize the party in every county in the State.

Day by day the returns make the Democratic majority in the House beautifully less. As between the Democrats and Republicans, the former will not have more than four or five majority. There will be only 8 Greenbackers in the House in the Forty-sixth Congress.

The President has struck an ugly snag in preparing his annual message—the Southern question. It bothers him and the work of preparing the message goes slowly on.

GREEN BAY, Nov. 14.—At noon to-day a fire broke out in the warehouse of E. A. Goodrich and L. J. Day, occupied by F. Harbut for storing coal, oil, etc. The warehouse contained 2,900 barrels of kerosene oil. This mass quickly was in flames and the fire spread thence to the large piles of coal on the dock and soon worked its way to the dock of Schwarz & Company, consuming a quantity of lumber and threatening the plating mill of that firm. The fire is one of the fiercest which ever raged here. The village of Depere sent a fire steamer to assist. Nearly 3,000 barrels of kerosene oil were consumed and a quantity of hard and soft coal. The total loss is at least $27,000.

OUR ORDNANCE.

Report of the Chief of the Ordnance Bureau of the United States Navy. Special to the Gazette.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 15.—Commodore Jeffries, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, in his report says that the great improvements abroad in improving cannon have to our benefit as we have our whole artillery to reconstruct, the plan to be adopted in such reconstruction should be the breech-loading on the screw breech, or the French method. Great progress has been made in the improvement of powder. The stock of this combustible has fallen very low, and a special appropriation should be made for the purchase of forty-five barrels. Improvements have been made in the Gatling and Lowell battery guns. The recommendation is made for the purchase of a number of Hatcher revolver cannon for actual trial in the service. The Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repairs, Eschby, in his report says, in the absence of an appropriation for building a new ship, the chief work of the Bureau has been in repairing. Expenditures have been chiefly for labor. Four monitors and two large torpedo boats are ready for service.

BLACK FRIDAY.

Who is Responsible for the Cause of that Eventful Day.
NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The true version of Black Friday, September 24, 1893, is expected to be disclosed through bankruptcy proceedings against Albert Speyer, who was broker for the Fisk and Gould clique of gold bulls. It is to be decided under this suit whether Speyer was responsible for the havoc of Black Friday, or whether Gould and his associates are to suffer as authors of the ruin. The first suit to be entered into involves the Fisk & Gould estate of $64,000,000.

CAN'T CATCH HIM.

Rumors of an Attempt to Obstruct Resumption.
NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—There is some apprehension that parties who distrust the ability of resumption, will make special efforts to get gold notes into their possession before the 1st of January with a view to locking them up, and so promoting speculation in gold. It is suggested that in order to prevent this, Secretary Sherman may exercise his option, and cease issuing such notes at once.

HALIFAX.

Landing-Day to be Made a Public Holiday in Nova Scotia.
HALIFAX, N. S., 14.—It is understood that the landing day of the new Governor General and Princess Louise will be proclaimed a public holiday. The erection of arches and preparations for the illuminating of buildings are in progress.

EDISON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Prof. Edison has ceased his experiments on the Metropolitan Elevated Railway, with a view to discovering some means of deadening the sound, and has also given up his experiments with the electric light. The Professor is suffering from ill health.

Migrations of Yellow Fever.

Yellow fever, like the cholera, is one of the great migrating diseases. Starting from some point within the tropics, it travels steadily onward from point to point as long as it does not meet freezing weather; and it travels northward by preference—comparatively seldom to the southward of the zone from which it sets out. Thus Brazil has suffered comparatively little from its epidemic visitations, though, as we shall see, the disease planted its germs long ago in Rio de Janeiro, on the extreme southern limit of the tropics. But its favorite course is toward the north. "Upon our Atlantic coast," says Dr. J. C. Nutt, a careful student and observer of the phenomenon, "as on the coast of the Mediterranean, it comes from time to time in one of these immense waves that know no bounds and stops at no impediments. The distance to which the disease extends seems to depend much upon the strength of the wave: it first strikes the Gulf and generally goes no farther. Occasionally it will break over the peninsula of Florida and reach Savannah and Charleston. In 1855, after many years of immunity, it struck Norfolk with full force, and only a few ripples as in 1853, 1856, 1870, have for half a century reached the Delaware river and the Bay of New York." And the same observer, writing eight years ago, adds some words which have a grand significance to-day: "Yellow fever, after a long absence, never makes its re-appearance in our Northern cities without a warning from the Gulf of Mexico. It seems not only for months, but often for several years, in vigorous action in its native habitat before it leaps over its accustomed bounds; and when once on the tramp, it may travel from Buenos Ayres to Quebec, leaving more graves in its track than Asiatic cholera. There is reason to fear that one of these eruptions is now marshalling its forces."

Let us glance at the course of one of these typical epidemics—at the one for instance, which started as far away as Rio de Janeiro, twenty-eight years ago, and travelled in six years all the way to New York—a journey of nearly four thousand miles—in a great circle. A great many years before, so many that the inhabitants of Rio had lost all recollection or tradition of the fact, the yellow fever had visited their city; but now the epidemic broke upon them then like lightning from a clear sky. This outbreak," says Dr. Nutt, "commenced in other cases the members of some certain church or other society desire one of their number elected to some office, and then the women of that organization turn out and cast their votes solid for the designated man. Probably half the women in Cheyenne have never cast a vote since the first second election after the law was passed. At first it was customary for carriages to visit all the residences on election days and convey the ladies to the polls in the interest of certain candidates, but that fashion is now almost a dead letter. There is a separate polling-place for the women to vote, and they are treated like ladies, being free from insults or jostlings; so that mixing with the mob cannot be the cause of their lack of interest in elections, but that politics is out of their legitimate sphere. As the adoption of the measure here has amounted to so little, your correspondent, can see little to praise or condemn, except that it has given the unscrupulous politicians a chance to use the "women of the town," together with the variety women, to further projects and men of the worst character.

His Bar in His Pocket.

Yesterday a small boy with his head bandaged entered a bookstore and said he wanted to buy some school books. As the clerk was waiting on him he inquired the reason why his customer's head was tied up in such a shape.

"Oh," responded the boy, in a matter-of-fact way, "a horse bit off my ear this morning."

"No," said the clerk, doubtfully; "what was the trouble, anyway?"

"I tell you he did bite it off," the lad said, with some warmth, "and I can prove it too. Just you look here now," and reaching down into his pocket he drew forth a card of newspaper, soaked with blood and clapped it down on the counter.

A crowd formed around the little fellow, who with great gravity and a pardonable air of triumph proceeded to unwrap the unsavory mass. Then he pulled forth a ghastly relic in the shape of a human ear, evidently torn out by the roots. "There didn't I tell you so?" he cried exultingly.

"He fetched off at the first nip," the boy gave his name as Egan, and said he lived on the Clapp farm. While working in the barn the horse reached his head over the side of the stall, caught the little fellow's ear in his teeth and chewed it off. Having thus delivered himself, the lad carefully rewrapped his precious ear, thrust it in his pocket and departed.—City Derrick.

Our Silver Mountains.

One of these mountain ranges, looking west to the snow-capped Sierras, with their zones of black pines, and gazing at the glittering deserts on the east, split and torn with deep canyons, pitted with light and shadow, and with a thousand herds of wild animals, has become famous the world over, and has made the nation rich. Other ranges, still to the east, have won a larger fame and smaller wealth. Here in this waste and stricken land, and among these mountains, are cities, active populations, and great works of nature, and in story and deed, the nation's pride and glory. These cities, with every appliance of modern science—with hotels, theatres, water-works, schools, gas mains, and every luxury—have not sprung up here because the beauty or convenience of the situation. There is no river, no sea, to bring commerce and the arts; no springs of health or even farms. These towns live and grow on the illusive and unstable foundations. They were built on a hope, and live on an expectation. Their hopes have been realized in a measure past dreaming or expression. Their expectations may collapse in a night. The very foundations beneath the house is shifty and unstable. The gas mains in the street bend and snap underground, for the very mountains groan and travail because of the greed of men. Some day the town will sink into the grave that lies so deep beneath its streets, or the people will flee away to more reasonable lands leaving hotels, halls, and dwellings empty in the wilderness. All this—these cities, this science and engineering, this gigantic capital spent in constructions more singular, more complicated, and more effective than any machinery of a like nature in the world—has but one excuse: the metal hid in the heart of the mountains. These men live out their work days for a metal at once the most universal, the most singular in its manifestation, and the most useful. These great engines and vast works are for the winning of a metal that swims in every gallon of sea water; that may hang invisible and dissolved in a glass of acid; that becomes black at the merest glance of the sun; that is now black, now white, now a mirror, and then a picture—a fit charm to wind about less stable charms, and then wedded to base metals in mental duties. Everywhere silver is found associated with the most common things—iron, copper, sulphur, antimony, and lead. It is scattered widely over the world, and is mined in Saxony, Bohemia, in Hungary and Transylvania, at Kongsberg in Norway, in Spain, in Mexico, along the Cordillera in South America, and in parts of this country, notably in Nevada, California, Utah, Montana, and Colorado.—Charles Barnard, in Harper's Magazine for December.

Starving to Death.

Dubuque Herald: Conrad Knapp, the man who is starving himself to death, is a resident in Keokuk, and has been for a present twenty-two years. For a number of years he has been employed in the Keokuk and Des Moines car shops at Keokuk. Nothing unusual was noticed in him until it was announced that the Rock Island railroad had leased the Keokuk and Des Moines car shops at Keokuk and the probability was that the shops would be removed from Keokuk. This seemed to add to Conrad's troubles, and it began to be noticed in the shops that he acted queerly. His fingers were always to motion, and he seemed to be constantly figuring. He grew worse, and finally it got to that it took him three days to do a job of work which he used to do in as many hours. He lagged so in his work that he was discharged about six weeks ago, and then he became convinced that his family were destined to die by starvation. Four weeks ago, when he tried to sit down to the table, he refused, saying that there would not be enough to keep the family, and from that time to this day he has eaten nothing, except during the first week an apple occasionally. For the past three weeks he has tasted absolutely no food at all, and for the last twelve days not a drop of water or anything in liquid shape has passed between his lips. Dr. Weisman, who is an old friend of Knapp's, has been attending him, and has endeavored to coax him to take some medicine, but he firmly refuses, and when pressed upon this point, or to drink or partake of food, he gets up and leaves the room. For six weeks he had not laid down in a bed, and he had scarcely twenty-four hours' sleep in all that time. He sits up in a chair, and occasionally, through sheer exhaustion, will fall into a doze, but he soon wakes up, and is as immovable in his purpose to starve himself to death as ever. Every conceivable means has been used to induce him to take food, sip water, or take medicine, but all without avail. He remains firm in his refusal, and persists in saying that it is fate—the fate of the family to starve, and that the rest will follow him soon enough. There is an evident softening of the brain, yet he remembers and recognizes his friends and occurrences that happened years ago. He is not a large man, only medium size, and his long fast has emaciated him fearfully, and his body begins to emit a sickening odor, so strong, in fact, as to be unbearable to those who have not been accustomed to being in his presence. He is haunted with the fear that the men he owes about town are in search of him and want to put him in the calaboose, and will sit by the windows all day narrowly scanning all passers-by.

The Value of a Letter.

From the Peoria Transcript.

The importance of having election tickets printed exactly correct is likely to receive a fresh illustration in the Fifteenth District of this State. In that district the Democratic candidate for Congress was named Decins, and the opposition, supported by the Republicans and Nationalists, Forsythe. In Shelby county the latter received 2,123 votes and Decins 1,909. But unfortunately some of the Forsythe tickets were printed without the final "e," and the Democratic judges have determined to count them as given to a different man than Forsythe with the "e." If this outrage can be consummated it will elect Decins, the Democrat, notwithstanding that it is quite evident that a majority of the people of the district intend to vote against him. The State Board of Canvassers at Springfield have yet to pass on the matter, and the question will probably arise as to whether they have a right to go behind the returns testified by the several County Clerks. It is probable that if the Democratic Clerk of the House of Representatives has the ghost of an excuse for doing he will put the name of Decins on the roll of the House instead of that of Forsythe, and compel the latter to make a contest for the place. It is a trick quite worthy of the Democracy, and a comper in the Patterson-Belford case decided by the present House.

A Faithful Dog's Intelligence.

A party of hunters recently went out in search of game, and left a dog of Luther Clark's tied at the camp. During their absence the animal broke loose, with the chain attached to his neck. The chain caught in some rocks in a canyon, several miles from the camp, and held the dog a prisoner. When the party was about to return to the camp, one of the deer hands ran up, and catching Mr. Clark's clothing in his teeth, tried to pull him in a different direction from the deer trail. Finally it was supposed that the dogs had brought down a deer, and the party followed the sagacious animal to find the dog that had been left behind a prisoner. All were proud of having so intelligent an animal in their company. Had it not been for this fortunate circumstance the dog would have been starved to death.—Eureka (Nevada) Leader.
